Do You Always Know The Right Answer?

When you are able to tap in and get divine guidance or feel and follow divine inspiration, your life is one of more ease and effortlessness living on purpose avoiding creating karma. I have also found it saves me time and money only doing and buying as guided.

I have a routine, tips and techniques I have learned and incorporate to provide the clarity to help living on purpose. I will be sharing those at our workshop on August 5, mentioned below. I will also be meditating and asking for specific guidance and tools for those in attendance.

What I have found is that different tools are appropriate for different people. I have sometimes been given one tool by divinity for one client and something completely different for seemingly the same issue to another client. But, God knows the big picture and always what is for the highest and best good for each and all.

Also, I have seen that new tools are given as people ascend to a higher vibration. For example, I learned ho'oponopono years ago. It is a Hawaiian term explaining the process to correct or set aright. Over time this 12-step process was shortened to four phrases. Although, I believe the 12-step process may still be taught, the latter is often shared on the internet, which is not as comprehensive but may be useful for certain occasions and used moment by moment especially in a pinch.

I have a beginning of a new process for this time, which I will share for the first time Sunday the 5th.

What is important to remember, is this is now and anything taught prior to today may already be outdated because times and energies have shifted. Everything is changing more rapidly these days with the shift in energies and rise to new dimensions. That's why it is important to also not assume and always check for divine guidance as to whether something is as purposeful today as yesterday.

Even with every clearing we do, life changes and what is appropriate or necessary may have altered.

If anyone feels blocked getting that divine guidance, knowing and inspiration, God will provide a teaching and clearing on our group healing call August 4, also with details below. He has the big picture. You don't even need think to decide when you can tap into the all-knowing for the answers to everything.

Much love,

Joy
