Let Go and Learn

Writing a weekly newsletter isn't always easy. Coming up with something new to say isn't necessarily easy either. That is especially true when the big push has been from Heaven to get you to let go of the past so you can improve your future sooner than later.

So, this morning I asked God to either tell me what to say or send one of his team to write the newsletter. So, God came through just now when I sat down to write. This is his title and message to you because he obviously knows you, and wants to help you.

"I have said this countless times before but many of you seem to miss the message. I am within you. If you don't surrender to me, you miss the greatest opportunities available to you. You have issues with surrender as if you are losing some part of yourself. You are gaining the best part of yourself when you do. You have nothing to lose and everything to gain.

Your resistance to letting go is astounding. You think you let go but you don't. You are often only kidding yourselves because you have such doubt within you. You doubt me. You doubt yourself. You doubt possibility. Your doubts are what keep you holding on. Until you are willing to totally surrender to me, you limit your outcomes.

It isn't that you think you know better. It isn't that you think I won't help you or take care of you. It is due to the misconceptions of who I am and who I am to you. I am you. You are an expression of me. That is all there is. You are an individualized expression. But, the part of me that is within you, that holds the big picture, is inaccessible to you unless you surrender to me, the greatest part of you within.

Until you learn to trust that I am within you with your best interest at heart, you lack for something and always will. For, it is through me that you access all there is and all there ever could be." ~ God

I am often clearing people's misperceptions of God and their blocks to connecting to him fully as well as surrendering because it is not uncommon. The more we have been able to clear any challenges connecting to God/Source, the easier it is for people to receive divine guidance and opportunity.

On a personal note, if there is something you wish to know more about, please advise and I will be happy to address as I can.

So, I write the above sentence and then God says this me:

"There are times when you need to give people what they want and at others what they need. This is a time to give them what they need. Trying to please people isn't always in their best interest. Serving them is, however, if guided by me. Tell them what they want and then engage them to tell them what they need is only a form of manipulation based on fear. Trust me when I say this. I know what people need. I always have and I always will."

That comment reminded me of the numerous recommendations I have heard over the years about meeting people where they are. I have often heard about couching messages and authenticity within language that people resonate with easier. I assume in some cases that is useful and in others maybe not. Always tuning in and asking God is useful before taking any tactic.

I can assure you that the better I have become at surrender, the more sweeter life has become, the more ease I experience and the happiest I have ever been. Of course, if you are challenged with it, I am happy to help. It is definitely a game changer. I'd also recommend if you have trouble surrendering, surrender the challenge of surrendering. God can only serve you to the extent you are truly surrendered.

Blessings,

Joy
